On March 10, 2005 the asset contacted SA [redacted] for instruction on how to proceed and was instructed not to contact [redacted] and that if contacted by [redacted] only specific and timely information was to be relayed to SA [redacted]

On March 11, 2005 the asset was contacted by [redacted] who provided the following information to the asset:

[redacted] NICHOLS for the [redacted] in order to develop information that might aid in [redacted]. During this time NICHOLS told [redacted] that a second load of demolitions, to be used in a follow on attack after the Oklahoma City bombing, was cached inside a private residence located at:

109 South 2nd Avenue, Herrington, Kansas.

The explosives were cached prior to the Federal Building bombing and were never used or recovered because the conspirators had been captured after the first bombing. The explosives load is inside the North basement, in a crawl space that leads under the house.

The demolition load is comprised of a cardboard box containing vials of nitro-methane, the liquid component to a binary agent known as kin-stick or kin-pac. Additionally there is a box of blasting caps. The card board box is located inside a military surplus ammo can.

[redacted] if the boxes and vials are fingerprinted they will reveal [redacted] prints, since he provided MCVEIGH and NICHOLS with the demolitions. [redacted] was a

[redacted] NICHOLS believes that [redacted] was actually an FBI informant and that the fingerprints will show that the FBI had prior warning to the Oklahoma City bombing.
