thanks for the update. Very sorry that this matter was handled the way it was, but you fought the good fight. God Help us all if the next terrorist incident involves the same type of plane.

take care

Cathy,

ITOS/RFU SSA Matibie has determined that we do not have enough for either a criminal search warrant or a FISA search warrant of Moussaoui's computer. We did not pursue this further because they have directed that this is an INS matter and that the "FBI does not have a dog in this fight". Of course, I strongly disagree.

The current plan is to deport Moussaoui to France. [redacted] has advised that they have the legal authority to hold Moussaoui and search his effects. This option was a distant third in my list of desired outcomes, but at this point I am so desperate to get into his computer, I'll take anything.

My big fear is that the French will determine that most, if not all of Moussaoui's criminal activity occurred outside France and they have no ability to convict (he's lived in the UK since circa 1995). In that case, he walks. I don't know if they'll have to return his property in this case (including the 747 flight manuals), but it seems possible.

The current wrangle with ITOS/RFU is over whether John Wessan (our INS co-case Agent) and I can go to France to be present for the search. LEGAT Paris relayed [redacted] request for FBI personnel to do just that, but RFU is opposed.

I'll keep you posted, but I am not optimistic. Thanks for your help and assistance!

Take care,
Harry

Harry:

Did you ever get anything that you could use to get the Search Warrant? Did I hear from you and figured that you were OK.

Best Luck,
Cathy
